Celebrate Spring With New Financial Habits

Hello,

This week marks the beginning of spring, and after a long winter, the promise of milder weather and trees and gardens coming back to life is a cause for optimism. Spring is also a time when many of us embark on a deep cleaning of our homes, clearing out cobwebs and clutter, and getting ready to enjoy the longer spring, then summer days.

But did you know that spring, when everything feels fresh and new, is a great time to clean up your finances too? Dust off your budget, sweep away bad spending habits, declutter your investments, and take a fresh look at your portfolio. With the new energy that spring brings, it's a good time to devote some of that energy into developing or refining good money habits that can help you on the road to financial freedom.

Let's get together to review your investment needs this spring, and make sure that your financial strategy is working to help meet your long-term goals.

Please feel free to share these articles with your family and friends, they are excellent conversation starters.
